Financial Aid Glossary 30-31

Financial Aid

General term that describes any source of student assistance outside the student or the student’s family. Funds awarded to a student to help meet postsecondary educational expenses. These funds are generally awarded on the basis of financial need and include scholarships, grants, loans, and employment.

Financial Aid Administrator

An individual who is responsible for preparing and communicating information pertaining to student loans, grants or scholarships, and employment programs, and for advising, awarding, reporting, counseling, and supervising office functions related to student financial aid. Accountable to the various publics which are involved and is manager or administrator who interprets and implements federal, state, and institutional policies and regulations, and is capable of analyzing student and employee needs and making changes where necessary.

Financial Need

The difference between the institution’s cost of attendance and the family’s ability to pay. Ability to pay is represented by the EFC for federal need-based aid and for many state and institutional programs.

Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA)

The financial aid application completed by the student, and the student’s parents if applicable, that collects household and financial information. The FAFSA is the foundation document for all federal need analysis computations and database matches performed for a student.

Scholarship

A form of financial assistance that does not require repayment or employment and is usually made to students who demonstrate or show potential for distinction, usually in academic performance.

Work Study Programs

One of the campus-based programs; a part-time employment program which provides jobs for undergraduate and graduate students who are in need of such earnings to meet a portion of their educational expenses.
FINANCIAL AID GLOSSARY:

Bachelor’s Degree
The degree given for successful completion of the undergraduate curriculum at a four-year college or a university. It is also called baccalaureate degree.

Certificate
The formal acknowledgment of successful completion of a particular program or course of study, particularly at a vocational school, trade school, or junior college.

Cost of Attendance (COA)
Generally, this includes the tuition and fees normally assessed a student, together with the institution’s estimate of the cost of room and board, transportation, and commuting costs, books and supplies, the cost of a computer, and miscellaneous personal expenses. In addition, student loan fees, dependent care, reasonable costs for a study abroad or cooperative education program, and/or costs related to a disability may be included, when appropriate. It is also referred to as “cost of education” or “budget”.

Expected Family Contribution (EFC)
The amounts a student and his or her family is expected to contribute toward the student’s cost of attendance as calculated by a Congressionally-mandated formula known as Federal Methodology. The EFC is used to determine a student’s eligibility for the student financial assistance programs.

Federal Pell Grant
A federal grant program for needy postsecondary students who have not yet received a baccalaureate or first professional degree, administered by the U.S. Department of Education.

Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (FSEOG)
One of the campus-based programs: grants to undergraduate students of exceptional financial need who have not completed their first baccalaureate degree and who are financially in need of this grant to enable them to pursue their education. Priority for FSEOG awards must be given to Federal Pell Grant recipients with the lowest EFCs.

Merit-based Aid
Financial aid awarded because of a student’s achievement or talent in a particular area, such as academic, athletic, or arts.

A BRIEF OVERVIEW OF FINANCIAL AID

When it comes to paying for school, you’re not alone. Grants, Work Study, and low-interest loans help make college affordable. Financial Aid is available from a variety of sources for college, career school, graduate school and professional school.

GRANTS AND SCHOLARSHIPS
Scholarships and Grants are often called “gift aid” because they are free money—financial aid that doesn’t have to be repaid. Grants are often need-based, while scholarships are usually merit-based.

Grants and Scholarships can come from the federal government, your state government, your college or career school, or a private or nonprofit organization. Do your research, apply for any grants or scholarships you might be eligible for, and be sure to meet application deadlines.

WORK STUDY
Work Study provides part-time jobs for undergraduate and graduate students with financial need, allowing them to earn money to help pay education expenses. The program encourages community service work and work related to the student’s course of study.

FEDERAL STUDENT LOANS/ PRIVATE STUDENT LOANS
If you apply for financial aid, your school will likely include student loans as part of your financial aid package. It’s important to understand what types of loans you are offered. Generally, there are two types of loans:

- Federal Student Loans: These loans are funded by the federal government (fixed interest rates).
- Private Student Loans: These loans are nonfederal loans, made by a lender such as a bank, credit union, state agency, or a school (variable interest rates).

If you need to borrow money to pay for college or career school, start with federal student loans.
Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA)

Filling out the FAFSA is relatively easy as long as you’ve done your taxes; approximately 80% of the FAFSA paperwork just pulls numbers off federal tax forms. File your FAFSA as soon as possible on or after October 1st to meet the priority deadline. You may file the FAFSA electronically using FAFSA on the Web, which contains built-in edits to help prevent costly mistakes, at www.fafsa.gov.

You will also need a Federal Student Aid Identification Number, or FSA, to submit the FAFSA for processing. Obtaining the FSA ID is fast and easy. Visit www.faid.ed.gov to get your FSAID set up. Vitaly important: do not share your FSA ID! Your FSA ID acts, among other things, as a digital signature, which means that it can be used to sign financial aid paperwork.

If you have questions on the FAFSA, there’s plenty of help available. Ask your school’s financial aid administrators or visit www.faid.ed.gov or attend a College FAFSA filing event for free help in completing and filing the FAFSA.

The Federal Pell Grant is the largest of the federal need-based grant programs. It is awarded automatically to students who qualify based on your FAFSA application results. Federal Pell Grants are awarded only to undergraduate students who have not earned a bachelor’s or a professional degree.

Did you know there’s a maximum amount of Federal Pell Grant funds you can receive over your lifetime? The amount of Federal Pell Grant funds you may receive over your lifetime is limited by federal law to be the equivalent of six years of Pell Grant funding. Since the maximum amount of Pell Grant funding you can receive each year is equal to 100%, the six-year equivalent is 600%. Check your Pell Lifetime Eligibility Used, visit: www.nslds.ed.gov.

Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (SEOG)

American Indian Services

Native Americans are struggling to create new better prospects for their people. Since 1958, AIS has designed many valuable programs which assist them towards self-sufficiency and building better communities. Chief among these is providing scholarships for needy Native Americans to attend colleges and vocational schools. There are many bright young students from various tribes who qualify academically for a college education. Yet, after high school, they have no means to paying college tuition. Over the last forty years, AIS has made it possible for thousands of Native Americans to attend college, obtain degrees and in turn, provide needed support in their communities. But there are so many more who need help. Please take the time to browse through the web site and learn more about how AIS is making a difference.
