

Career Self-Assessments

Work Style Preference: Holland Code Career Test

<https://www.truity.com/test/holland-code-career-test>

Work Values

<https://www.vawizard.org/wizard/value-assess>

Personality Test

This personality assessment starts with Myers-Briggs dichotomies and adds archetypes from Jungian theory as well as some from the Big Five. Which is psychobabbly way of saying you'll learn whether you're an introvert or extrovert if you take this test— and at the end, you'll be labeled with one of 16 personality types with cool names like “Mediator,” “Commander” and “Defender.” Most importantly, the test promises to take less than 12 minutes.

<https://www.16personalities.com/free-personality-test>

Skills Assessment

<https://www.vawizard.org/wizard/skill-assess>

Interest Assessment

<https://www.vawizard.org/wizard/interest-assess>

Other Free Assessments:

<http://www.predictiveindex.com/free-assessment-offer>

<http://www.assessment.com/>

Career Cluster Interest Survey

<https://www.careerwise.mnscu.edu/careers/clusterSurvey>

O*Net Interest Profiler

Enter your Work style Scores:

<https://www.mynextmove.org/explore/ip>

Big Five Personality Assessment divide people into five personality traits: openness, conscientiousness, extraversion, agreeableness and neuroticism. The assessment identifies a preference out of the five and can help you identify learning styles as well as work preferences.

This test will also make you laugh a little along the way. Try answering “I have a rich vocabulary” or “I worry about things” with a straight face.

<http://personality-testing.info/tests/IPIP-BFFM/>

Identify your motivations and what’s really important to you in your career.

<http://www.myplan.com/assess/values.php>