Classes Started Tuesday!

It's hard to fully express our excitement over the start of this semester. We're reveling in the energy of students enrolling, reaching toward their interests and expanding their efforts to take control of their own learning. It is both inspiring and humbling. I think I can speak for the faculty and staff when I say we are pleased to meet such a demand.

So far, we have had 6159 course enrollments, are providing 426 sections, and witnessing a packed parking lot with the hustle and bustle of 2300 students returning for another challenging semester within the walls of our classrooms and labs.

For those who like to drill down into the statistics and numbers, be sure to look at our dashboard showing a 3% increase in students enrolling this year, compared to last. I am grateful for the hard work of so many of you who have helped influence this increase.

Early Childhood Education Bachelor's Degree at UNM Gallup

It's an inspiring moment for us here at UNM. We're expanding our curriculum to train the teachers of tomorrow. As many of you know, we seek to play a pivotal role within the community here by helping to grow our young people. We are pleased to offer Early Childhood Education courses for the first time, as the first step toward becoming a leader in Early Childhood development. Please encourage those you know to take a look and consider enrolling in this training. This small step can make a big difference. For more information, please reach out to Lewis Gambill at 505-863-7541.

President's State of the University Address

“Opportunities are not found, they are created”

It was a great feeling when we accepted the invitation of President Garnett S. Stokes to attend the University Address and serve as a part of her executive cabinet leadership team. I was honored to represent our Gallup team. I was energized by her mention of the branches getting select baccalaureate and graduate degrees, and stood tall when we were specifically mentioned. For that I hope you stand tall too.
